Shoot The Messenger is a small tool that displays your current status of the Messenger Service. C-5's (Microsoft's malware program) behavior C-5's malware is a Windows program used by Microsoft to provide service of e-mail. In that service, Microsoft sends unsolicited advertisements, pop-up ads, and spam email from its C-5 servers. Microsoft's customers also allow Microsoft to install it on their computers. Once it has been installed, Microsoft uses C-5's spyware to maintain privacy by making sure that the recipient is happy with their purchased service (i.e. e-mail). However, as in all spyware, there is some very questionable behavior. Behavior of C-5's spyware By uploading a list of compromised computers to C-5's servers, Microsoft's spyware can automatically send out the same advertisements and pop-up ads on all these computers. This is done to convince the user that the advertisements and pop-up ads on their computer came from C-5. This is in line with the way spyware is sold. It notifies the user that the pop-up ads came from the spyware maker. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a liquid crystal display and a driving method thereof. (b)

Description of the Related Art In general, a liquid crystal display has a liquid crystal layer with a dielectric anisotropy and an optical anisotropy which are provided between a pair of substrates. An electric field is applied to the liquid crystal layer through the substrates to control the arrangement of the liquid crystal molecules, thereby performing the image display. The liquid crystal display is largely classified into a vertical electric field type and a horizontal electric field type according to the direction of the electric field used to drive the liquid crystal. The vertical electric field type has a structure in which a common electrode and a pixel electrode are respectively formed on the substrates and a vertical electric field is generated between the electrodes. On the other hand, the horizontal electric field type has a structure in which a pixel electrode and a
